"The audience loved her and that love just increased as the concert continued. When she sings, dead silence. Her stage presence is unbelievable. I know she sang for an hour, but it seemed like 15 seconds." - yodasr

"The little girl is gone and replaced by a gorgeous, happy, chatty, gracious and unbelievably gifted teen." - snoberg

"We call it "The Jackie Effect", but here it happened like I have never seen before. It was like the entire auditorium was getting it. Jackie is so much better than she has ever been." - shesmorethanasinger

"Jackie apologized to the audience about the late start to the concert. She told us how she and Zach had hid John Mario's shoes and he had gone back to the hotel looking for them.. She happily apologized to John too - his big smile told us all we needed to know - she's a lot of fun..!
Carmel was grandiose..I imagine the wonderful venue, acoustics and sell-out crowd were very gratifying - and so, Jackie was special."

"I could easily not only see Jackie but also John Mario as he was conducting. The emotion which he shows in his conducting is amazing. He gives it his all. I also noticed in this concert how much the two are in almost constant non-verbal communication." - pjtowncrier

Music is a very important thing in my life. Beside it being my passion, I've grown up with music. Music is everywhere.”

—JACKIE EVANCHO

Soprano sensation Jackie Evancho to sing tonight

SARA TOTH | Assistant Editor

Jackie Evancho has performed all over the world, from Russia to Japan, Las Vegas to Toronto. But she's never performed at Chautauqua, a mere 160 or so miles from her hometown of Pittsburgh.

That's about to change.

At 8:15 p.m. tonight in the Amphitheater, the 14-year-old soprano will make her Chautauqua debut, performing with the Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra in “An Evening with Jackie Evancho.”

Evancho first burst onto the national scene in 2010 on the reality show “America's Got Talent.” She was a runner-up on that competition and, in a sense, she hasn't stopped running since.

She's released four albums (three since “America's Got Talent”), performed for the Obamas and sung before 100,000 people at the St. Petersburg Economic Forum. She has appeared in a PBS “Great Performances” special as well as numerous television shows, and even acted in Robert Redford's 2013 film “The Company You Keep.” She models, too, and was featured in the Fall 2012 GUESS Kids clothing campaign. A fifth album, Ausulting, is set for release this fall.

“My life has changed a lot since ‘America's Got Talent,’” Evancho said. “One of the biggest things that's changed is that people recognize me and want pictures or autographs. Also, I get to travel all over the world doing what I love.”

When Evancho leaves the Amp stage after her performance tonight, she said she hopes the audience “feels that they experienced everything that they hoped they would.”

“I also hope they see the growth in me since the time I was on the show,” she said.

Evancho was just 10 when she appeared on NBC's “America's Got Talent,” where she performed pieces like the aria “O mio babbino caro” from Puccini's Gianni Schicchi, “Pie Jesu” from Andrew Lloyd Webber's Requiem and “Time to Say Goodbye” — a song famously performed by Andrea Bocelli and Sarah Brightman. While Evancho was on the show, she also performed the song with Brightman.

Known for her classical performances, Evancho said she listens to a variety of music — classical to relax, or “top 40 or electronic dance music” if she's with family or friends.

From our shuttle bus driver: After they had to open the overflow parking lots and then even lots beyond that. “It's the lady they have singing tonight's fault.”

From one usher: (when all the normal seats were filled and people started taking seats behind the stage — those are never sold): “OMG this is so cool!”
